

now! you can get it from a marketplace you can trust.

SAVE up to 70% off retail - Auctions starting at $1

The marketplace you c

BID TODAY!

America's Sports Website

--Select City-- | Pro Football | College Football | Pro Basketball | College Basketball | Baseball | NASCAR | Hockey | Golf | Poker

Verizon Business DSL Two months free when you sign up online

Home - Back

Adjust Font Size:

Metro Detroit Toddler Taps into Talent: 21-Month-Old Boy Shines on the Drums

Publication Source Detroit Free Press
 Publication Date 2006-03-08

By Emilia Askari, Detroit Free Press

Mar. 8--"Go, baby!" Bernie Pavone of Bloomfield Hills yells.

His son, 21-month-old Julian Pavone, grins and bangs his drumsticks against the snare in front of his high chair, then he twists and pings a cymbal or two before turning back to the DW drum set and whaling away as he sucks his pacifier.

After a quick session, he peeks up at his mother, aunt, cousin and grandmother, who are sitting on steps watching the impromptu concert. They clap admiringly and cheer.

"See," said his grandmother, Gloria Tactac of Bloomfield Hills, "he's looking at the audience like, 'Come on, give me some love.' The kid loves an audience."

Julian has played before some big audiences lately. A couple weeks ago, he debuted before about 30,000 fans of the Cleveland Cavaliers, getting a standing ovation for his 2-minute improvisation during the fourth-quarter break.

Detroit's WDIV-TV (Channel 4) broadcast live from his house Tuesday night.

Julian's drumsticks fly joyously as he attacks his large, professional-looking drum set, his toy drums, a coffee table.

But as to whether he's truly a prodigy drummer as his father and family friends proudly claim, at least one expert expressed reservations.

"A prodigy is someone who's playing at an elite level at an abnormally young age," said Kendra Whitlock, director of pops and specials for the Detroit Symphony Orchestra. "It's not just banging around and keeping time."

Julian is still a toddler who sometimes throws his sticks on the ground and doesn't want to play when he's tired.

Still, Whitlock acknowledged that many kids less than 2 years old would have trouble holding drumsticks. "Most kids don't have the motor skills to do that," she said.

Julian's father's recording company is preparing a CD of the toddler playing, called "Go, Baby!"

Bernie Pavone, 40, said he discovered Julian's interest in drums when his son was 3 months old.

Julian was in a harness on his father's lap as Bernie Pavone played. Julian grabbed the sticks and took a turn.

Julian now is at the drums half an hour to two hours a day, not all in one stretch.

Famed jazz bassist Ralphe Armstrong of Detroit was impressed.

"He's a genius," said Armstrong, who initially was skeptical when Bernie Pavone, an old acquaintance, called and asked him to listen to his son play.

Julian also has won the heart of drummer William Winfield III of Cleveland, who is the Cavaliers' drum line coordinator. He met Julian a couple months ago after closing a business deal with Bernie Pavone.

To learn more about Julian, go to www.littledrummerbaby.com.

photo

Julian Pavone plays drums at home in Bloomfield Hills on Tuesday. He could soon make an appearance on ABC's "Good Morning America." (RICHARD LEE/Detroit Free Press)

Copyright (c) 2006, Detroit Free Press

Distributed by Knight Ridder/Tribune Business News.

For information on republishing this content, contact us at (800) 661-2511 (U.S.), (213) 237-4914 (worldwide), fax (213) 237-6515, or e-mail reprints@krtinfo.com.

Sign up for Breaking News e-mail from TheSportsKing!

About TheSportsKing.com | Advertise On The King | Contact

Privacy Policy | Terms Of Use | Home

© Copyright 2000 - 2006 thesportsking.com® All Rights Reserved
thesportsking.com is a registered trademark of Zodante Inc.

This site is best viewed at 1024X768 on Internet Explorer